DYNAMIC FORCE OF DICTATOR IS SEEN IN ACTION

Louisiana Was His; Amazing Political Strategy Made It So

Editor's Note: H. O. Thompson, chief of the United Press staff in Washington and a student of Sen. Huey P. Long's career both in the past and present, has written a series of sketches of the senator, revealing the extent of Long's career in his home state, Louisiana.

By H. O. THOMPSON

A slight, thin, dark-haired man, with a high forehead and a small, pointed nose, he came to the supreme control of an entire state. He had visions of empire, and he had the power to make them a reality. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

KENTUCKY RIVALS - At left is Lieutenant Governor A. B. Chandler, 59, and right, Thomas S. Rhea, former chairman of the State Highway Commission, as they prepared for the Democratic primary election for governor in Kentucky. Rhea had the support of Governor Ruby Laffoon in advocating a 3 per cent sales tax, while Chandler was a foe of Laffoon and the tax.

He wiped away the last resistance to his rule... He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

Through this natural acumen and his flair for the spectacular, he came to the supreme control of an entire state. He had visions of empire, and he had the power to make them a reality. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

I watched Long operate while his 2,500 millionaires camped in the city with armed soldiery at the disposal of the state. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

There is a portrait of one crisis through which I saw him emerge, and I found an illustration of his dynamic force. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation. He was a man of the people, and he was a man of the future. He was a man of the present, and he was a man of the past. He was a man of the world, and he was a man of the nation.

Editor's Note: George Morris, assistant publisher of the Memphis Commercial Appeal and a close student of southern politics, explains in the following article the complicated political situation in Louisiana caused by the assassination of the state's ex-dictator, Sen. Huey P. Long.

By GEORGE MORRIS

BATON ROUGE, La. (UP)—The death of Senator Huey P. Long at the hands of an irresponsible assassin, from achieving the political position which he hoped, allegedly secretly plotted, or openly expressed the wish that he might be killed, is destined to bring on a struggle unprecedented in Louisiana's history.

Louisiana Was His Amazing Political Struggle Made It So

Editor's Note: H. O. Thompson, chief of the United Press staff in Washington, and a student of Sen. Huey P. Long's career both in the national capital and in Louisiana, has written a series of biographical sketches of the Louisiana dictator. The first, revealing the extent of Long's power in his home state, follows:

By H. O. THOMPSON
(Copyright, 1935, by United Press)
A sightseeing bus jitters along a highway bordered by cotton fields in New Orleans. The guide, who has been describing in rapturous monotonies the various show places at which the visitors crane their necks, raises his voice dramatically to a shrill cry: "And ahead on the right," he declares, "that pink, stucco house—home of the most talked-of man in America!"

"That," asks the lady from California, "are the soldiers there?" "In Senator Long a friend of the governor?" "Senator Long is the governor,"

the lady from New York replies. "That," she adds, "is the house of the most powerful man in Louisiana."

"That," she adds, "is the house of the most powerful man in Louisiana."

"That," she adds, "is the house of the most powerful man in Louisiana."

lieutenant says, apologetically. "Hell! Long trousers, sliding from the ends of my pants, running like a break."

Winston Overton, candidate for re-election to the supreme court, was a Long man. Overton's nomination and election of a political opponent, Judge Thomas F. Porter, went into action. Without hesitation, he would say, "Overton is dead. Now, here's what I want you to do. I want you to go back to work. There are no counter-arguments, no counter-arguments, just an 'Okay, Huey,' and the machine was running along."

"If this doesn't work out right," Huey told me, "we'll get the legislature and pass a law. We're not going to let Porter win. I'm on the verge of wrecking him. But his blindness was a mark and his incoherence part of the democratic performance."

There was a natural acumen and his flair for the spectacular, he came to the supreme court of Louisiana. He had vision and extending this dominance elsewhere—perhaps over the entire country.

"I watched Long operate while his 2,500 millionaires met in the outskirts of New Orleans, and he heard Huey say, 'I heard Huey Overton is dead.' I heard Huey say, 'I heard Huey Overton is dead.' I heard Huey say, 'I heard Huey Overton is dead.'"

MORNING PRAYER

Let the people praise Thee, O God, let all the people praise Thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; God, even our God shall bless us. Amen.

JUST BE GLAD

For, we know, not every sorrow
Can be sad;
So, forgetting all the sorrow
We have had,
Let us fold away our fears,
And put by our foolish tears,
And through all the coming years
Just be glad.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

POTATOES UNDER GOVERNMENT CONTROL

In the closing hours of congress Irish potatoes were put under control of the A.A.A. And now here is the situation: Any farmer who sells more than five bushels of potatoes next year must place in them an authorized government container and each container must have a government stamp on it indicating it can be offered for sale. And any farmer who violates this regulation or housewife who buys potatoes not so stamped, can be fined $1,000 and sent to jail for 30 days. If we were to read that Russia had any such regulation we would all condemn it as interfering with fundamental rights, but we have become so used to regulation we think it all right.

Every farmer is to be given a quota showing exactly how many potatoes he can sell that are not taxed, and any he raises in excess of that quota must pay a tax of 45 cents a bushel if he offers them for sale. The price of potatoes has been quite low this year, and the farmers have been cut down and the farmers have been using this surplus acreage largely for planting potatoes. And if any farmer violates any of these regulations the second time he is subject to a sentence of two years in the penitentiary—although it might be hard to get a jury to impose any such sentence. Who would have imagined three years ago that it would be a crime for a farmer to try to sell his surplus potatoes free and openly? When will regulation end? Never so long as Wallace and Tugwell are given authority.

LIQUOR REGULATION

The legislature that convenes next Monday will have some hard nuts to crack. First it must grapple with the liquor control question. The people have voted to repeal prohibition and there should be a desire on the part of both wets and dries to frame a bill that will reduce to a minimum the evils of liquor. Some 14 of the wet states have adopted the state monopoly plan. That is, the state establishes dispensaries where liquor can be sold. We believe in all of them liquor can only be sold in quantities of a pint or more than a pint. It cannot be drunk in the place of sale and it is sold in most states at a 25 per cent profit, the entire profit going to the state. In Ohio this plan has brought $8,000,000 profit to the state and in Pennsylvania it has yielded $20,000,000. It is believed that taking all private profit out of the traffic will greatly lessen its evils. By forbidding its being drunk on the premises should eliminate much of the social drinking. It is also claimed for the state monopoly plan that it will curb the bootlegger sales. We doubt this. The United States government tax is $2.10 per gallon which precludes any idea that liquor can be sold so cheap the bootlegger cannot compete. This is a fallacy. Corn liquor can be made at a cost of less than 50 cents a gallon. Those who wish to make money out of selling will, of course, oppose this state monopoly plan. Many of the hotels want to serve liquor and oppose the plan. It is believed it is generally conceded the less liquor that is consumed the better. Therefore the state monopoly plan will tend to lessen drinking—not increasing it.

In November, 1936, the people will vote on the question of whether they favor the license system or the state monopoly. We firmly believe they will decide in favor of the latter and believe the legislature can save much confusion by establishing it in advance.

NEW YORK Inside Out

By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK.—They've been cleaning up the old Hippodrome in preparation for Billy Rose's new show, "Jumbo," and out of the junk pile have come a lot of discarded gadgets once associated with famous stars of another day.

Old timers, looking over the inventory, are still brushing sentimental tears away right and left. There's the tank in which Annette Kellerman used to make her historic dive in what was then the daring one-piece bathing suit. From another musty cellar bin came the stained glass windows from that theatrical episode now known as Gest's Folly. This was the "Passion Play" which cost Morris Gest exactly $225,000 and an unestimated amount of heartache.

Another tank unearthed from the dim shadows was the one in which Helen Carr used to dive 75 feet into lukewarm water. And a couple of ambitious diggers managed to find, on the 44th Street side, a chute for pitchforking her.

They don't dive into tanks any more. And Annette Kellerman is in retirement at her New Jersey home, reading books for excitement. What could have happened to the horses?

DISCRETION
Diego Rivera, the mural painter, has just got into a fiery debate down in Mexico City with Siqueiros, one of his fellow artists, and gun play was only a hair's breadth off before the fracas was concluded. The ponderous Rivera is continuing the tradition which in New York flared up in the now famous controversy with Rockefeller over the Radio City murals.

But gun play doesn't always enter into Rivera's encounters. When he was last in New York, there was a comic incident which might have been lifted straight out of "Alice in Wonderland." Rivera had agreed to paint a mural for a stipulated fee within a period not to exceed fifteen days. He finished the job in eleven days and was about to go home, when the plasterer who had contracted to carry out Rivera's design set up a terrific howl.

The contract called for fifteen days' work, and the plasterer refused to let Rivera leave the job before the full period was up. For four days the Mexican artist had to sit around idling so that the plasterer could daub away in dumb show and thus be able to collect the extra days' pay.

IN REVERSE
Launched the other day with Theodore Irwin, who just wrote "Strange Passage," a novel based on the deportation of aliens from the United States. Ted reminds me that Ellis Island is going into a sad decline. Once the Grand Gateway to America, with hordes of incoming aliens from every corner of the globe packing the buildings on the famous island, it's now more of an Exit Gate for unwelcome guests.

As recently as four years ago, more than a thousand travelers used to pass through in a week. Today the average attendance is only about 150 aliens, of which about 125 are deportees. And the ironic part of it is that the federal government has appropriated a million and a half dollars to beautify the island.

Talk about looking stable door!

ACCOMMODATING
Well, with all this confusion about the unemployed in town, I ought to be able to sneak through the one about the minister who came upon a street cornerist blaring away on a quiet Sunday morning in residential Brooklyn.

The minister stopped the tooting merriment, reminded him of the Sabbath day, and asked severely: "My good man, do you know the Fourth Commandment?"

"But if you whistle a few bars, I'll do the rest."

Watching business men and politicians, Glen Frank, President of the University of Wisconsin, can not see where people have more to hope for from politicians.

Mr. Farley's answer to that would be more political jobs.—Toledo Blade.

With the requirement that all brakes shall be thoroughly inspected, a lot of people, instead of running over a man, should be able to stop right on top of him.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

H. G. Wells is said to be the most prolific writer of the age. And all this time we thought it was Anonymous, Pro Bono Publico, Old Subscriber, or Steady Reader. Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

Texas has now repealed prohibition. It's getting easier and easier for a traveling man to get about the country without being of the latter and believe the legislature can save much confusion by establishing it in advance.

BOILS DUE TO BACTERIA GETTING INTO HAIR FOLLICLE AT GREAT RATE

Judging from the inquiries I have received concerning boils, this must be an unusually favorable year for them. I am inclined to think they form one of the diseases which we cannot blame on the weather, so there is nothing left as a cause, except the depression.

When I was a boy I was told that each boil was worth five dollars. I have made more than that out of many of them. The afflicted one was willing to pay five dollars and more to get rid of one. A boil is a simple thing to start with, but it is like the acorn—mighty boils from little ones grow.

Boils are the result of bacterial invasion of the skin around a hair follicle or cutaneous gland. Under ordinary circumstances our skin carries many disease germs, which are virtually harmless unless the skin is cut or torn. Then they get down under the outer skin at a hair follicle and commence to multiply. Scratching or rubbing enables them to go beyond the protective outer skin or epidermis. That is one reason they are so common on the back of the neck, face, hands and arms.

The germs commence to grow, the white corpuscles in the blood rush in to destroy them. They usually succeed, but sometimes they are overwhelmed and die. The surrounding tissue becomes inflamed and the germs kill the surrounding tissue and we have left a large or small mass of dead tissue, called a boil. The first warning sign is a little red spot at the root of a hair. It grows larger, the redness spreads, a lump forms which is broad at the base and comes to a point. The pain from tension or alcohol is rubbed in, it can often be aborted.

Examine for Diabetes
Any person who continues to suffer from boils and carbuncles should see a physician and find if there are any diabetes present. The most boils and carbuncles, and the most serious ones, are those accompanying diabetes. The germs which cause these diseases, such as typhoid fever, scarlet fever, malaria, and diphtheria, are not due to poor blood, but they must be treated through the blood, if extensive. The question of how they should be treated locally is a question of the individual case. When the first red spot develops, if it is touched with a glass rod dipped in carbolic acid, or if tincture of iodine is rubbed in, it can often be aborted.

Profiles for Today

FOKKER STILL GENIUS OF THE AIRPLANE

The recent air made by the Senate Munitions Inquiry Committee when they could not immediately find Anthony Fokker reveals again what an important world figure is this designer and manufacturer of the all-important airplane. Fokker was selling planes abroad. He readily admitted selling planes to such countries as Switzerland, Italy and Czechoslovakia, but insisted he knew nothing of any warlike angles to these deals. He had not been hiding away from the Senate—he had merely been taking a little rest on his yacht.

To those who know the aviation expert this was not unusual. Fokker is a mechanical genius, and probably can not be held down to regular hours or habits. He comes and goes without particular schedule; he does not get a normal amount of sleep at night, but instead does it every once in a while during the day. If he gets a sudden idea he is likely to assemble his assistants at his Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., plant where he has been used.

General tonics such as syrup of the iodine of iron, twenty drops in a glass of water after meals is good. Compound syrup of hypophosphites helps. Vaccines made from streptococcus pyogenes will often give a recurrence of a capsule of five grains of anti-pyren taken before meals and one of five grains of quinine after meals, continued for several weeks will usually stop the occurrence of boils.

IL DUCE'S WARRIOR SONS—Two sons of Premier Mussolini of Italy, Vittorio and Bruno, in their official uniforms, are seen here with their father, Benito, in a recent photograph. Both young men were recently commissioned as pilots in the Italian Air Force.

HAUPTMANN CLUE DISCOUNTED—New Jersey officials scoffed at the announcement in Hollywood, Cal., that the baby Lindbergh baby is alive and with a family on Long Island. The announcement was made by C. Lloyd Fisher, center, above, in conference with Vincent A. Marco, right, Hollywood attorney for Mrs. Emma Glockner, left, Bruno Hauptmann's sister.

SPANISH NETMEN—At left is Enrique Maler of Barcelona, Spain, who attracted much attention by his fast tennis playing at the International tournament at Roland Garros in Paris. He is shown with his competitor, Manuel Alonso, whom he defeated, thereby gaining a position in the quarter finals.

BAER PLANS EARLY OFFENSIVE—Indications at the training camp of Max Baer in Speculator, N. Y., were that Baer would not wait for a fight with the champion, Primo Carner, but would start his bout scheduled for Sept. 24 in the Yankee Stadium, New York. Above is Baer as he put in some hard work on a tree preparatory to heavy training in punches.

225 A MONTH—William Abernethy, whose Social Credit League, promising $25 a month to anyone, soared into power in the recent provincial election in Alberta, Canada.

HURRICANE'S FORCE BRINGS DESOLATION—Sweeping out of the tropics the hurricane that burst over southern Florida brought death to hundreds and caused widespread desolation. Typical of the damage is this view of a highway bridge near Tavernier where the storm's heavy rain, located on a key, was almost wiped out by giant waves and the force of the screaming gale.

ANXIOUS FAMILY AWAITS WORD—Eagerly awaiting any news that indicated the safety of Captain Einar Sundstrom, commander of the reef-bound liner Dixie aground on the Florida key, here are Mrs. Sundstrom and her two daughters, Florentine and Lillian. The anxious family is shown in their home at Little Neck, Long Island, N. Y. Sundstrom expressed utmost confidence in her husband's ability.

SCALES MOUNT STEELE—Shown with his wife in the Yukon Territory is Walter A. Wood, Jr., who, with three companions, scaled Mount Steele, one of the most inaccessible mountains of the Northwest, for the first time in history.

CONTENDER—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vire of Philadelphia, veteran of many golfing wars, is shown here in the championship for the eleventh time in her career, as she played toward the championship for the 39th women's national championship golf matches at the Atlantic City Country Club. Mrs. Vire had won five golf crowns in 13 years.

STORM-WEARY—A race against postwar was instituted in the Florida state sweep by the hurricane, while Federal and state officials dashed over high at Matecumbe Key where casualties were heavy.
